the Convention and the candidates presented Mr. Bell was received with cheers. He said: It would be convery to human nature if he did not feel deeply sensible of the honor paid him, but he also felt that the assemblage was mainly to approve the action of the Convention. He did not appear to make a speech from the political topics of the day, but to inter his thanks for the present manifestations. He alluded to the causes which led to the Convention; It being the distrust of both the Democratic and Republican parties. He trusted that the party to succeed them would be a party of 20,000 persons in Idalio, and argued that it unblican parties. He trusted that the Mr. Grow said there were form 15,100 it y to succeed them would be a party of 20,000 persons in Idalio, and argued that i

This ack the country to the time and objects of tected by an established government. This he constitutions of arepublican government as the most monstrous one of the series and not exhaust its energies on abstractions. Mr. Clark, of Missouri said that every t is manifest that the public confidence in the stability of the Republic has deteriorated within the last 29 years. The Convenon therefore wisely banished from its condred miles from the capital of Kansas and the people there now have their own pro-visional government in defiance of the ex-isting law. He controverted Mr Theores' views about terratorial jurisdiction and him-ed that the latter was not sound in the Re-unblight faith. ileration all exciting topics that hal scat-ered distrust between the North and South, nowing that it could lead to no public good: that Convention thought fit, among such a host of worthies, to select him. It is a complement of which I feel my very unworthings.

He concluded by trusting that the party ounded with such auspices, harmony and good feeling would be successful in estab-ishing a new era, and that the Convention thall not have labored in vain. His course r the last twenty years was well known, id it would be needless to refer to it again, marking the crowd for the honor conferred n him, Mr. Bell retired amid hear; y though of general cheering.
